Course Description:

Design for All explores how inclusive, purpose-driven design can enhance collective well-being by addressing the interconnection between human health, social connection, technology and environmental responsibility. Through five key lenses — Wellbeing, Connection, Learning, Experience, and Thriving — we explore how design can create shared spaces that foster belonging, support regeneration, and shape a more joyful future for all.

Course Objectives:

1. Explore the evolving drivers of inclusive design, shaped by cultural movements, visual trends and collective values that influence how spaces are created and experienced.
2. Identify emerging color directions that support inclusive environments and can be thoughtfully applied in commercial interior settings.
3. Investigate the lasting environmental implications of design choices, emphasizing responsible practices that consider both people and planet
4. Discover innovative uses of materials and color, offering creative inspiration for designing spaces that welcome and reflect a broad spectrum of human experiences.
